Main news

- Starting next week, the UK will lift compulsory quarantine for fully vaccinated visitors from the EU and the US.
- The UK government announced it will ease coronavirus quarantine rules for thousands of essential workers with the aim of ending staff shortages.
- As the Olympics begin, Tokyo recorded 2,848 new COVID-19 cases on Tuesday, exceeding the earlier record of 2,520 cases on January 7. Tokyo is officially under its fourth state of emergency.
- In the US, the surging infection rate caused by the coronavirus Delta variant has led officials to reconsider the path to post-pandemic normalcy and is spurring more calls for the unvaccinated to get jabs.
- The French parliament has approved legislation to make COVID-19 passes necessary to access the most crowded places, and vaccinations mandatory for health workers amid a surge in infections across the country.
- India's health ministry announced the country will meet its target of supplying more than half a billion COVID-19 vaccine doses by the end of this month, but it added that not all doses may be administered by then.
- President Widodo announced Indonesia extended its COVID-19 restrictions by a week to contain infections, after the government said it would add more intensive care units amid a rise in deaths.
